

November 2019

Travel and Tourism - Guyana

“Guyana, the ‘land of many waters’, has an enticing reputation as a hidden gem of South America, well off the beaten track and a great ecotourism and adventure destination. It has an exceptional natural landscape of dense, virgin rainforest, majestic waterfalls and rivers and an extraordinarily diverse cultural heritage. As ...

Travel and Tourism - Peru

According to the United Nations World Tourism Organization (UNWTO)’s International Tourism Highlights 2019 Edition, the number of international arrivals in South America grew at an average annual rate of 5.8% per annum between 2010 and 2018. This is one of the most rapid growth rates in the world ...

Travel and Tourism - Colombia

“Colombia’s president, Iván Duque, is on record as saying that his government is committed to making tourism a bigger sector of the economy and to that end, he and his fellow politicians have been targeting foreign companies to encourage them to invest in Colombia, especially in tourism infrastructure.”

— ...

Travel and Tourism - Chile

“Chile was the lead destination in Lonely Planet’s Best in Travel 2018, and on trend for long-haul travellers seeking adventure, exploration and experiences. Most people visit for its diverse natural wonders, but there’s something for everyone, from adrenalin junkies to wine lovers, and at its centre is the cool capital ...

Travel and Tourism - Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

“The Falkland Islands are a unique tourist destination, home to an unparalleled number of sea birds, marine mammals and numerous penguin colonies in this extraordinarily pristine wilderness. In spite of being hard to reach, tourism in the Falklands is on the rise and many choose to include the Islands on ...

Travel and Tourism - Argentina

“Tangible strides have been made in Argentina’s travel and tourism industries, mostly due to policy changes that have helped facilitate growth in international arrivals and redistribution of both international and domestic tourism flows to all regions of the country. If the incoming president elect continues to implement policies that will ...