“Banks were considered essential and kept open during the peak of the COVID-19 pandemic, but no one was really visiting their local branch out of concerns for virus exposure.”

- Jennifer White Boehm, Associate Director, Finance Reports

This report looks at the following areas:

- The impact of COVID-19 on consumer behavior and the banking market
- Trends in US banking
- Banking behaviors affected by COVID-19
- Reasons to switch banks

The total number of US banks is falling, as is the total number of branches. Consumers are quickly adopting digital channels – both online and mobile – but will still be looking for the safety of a brick-and-mortar branch as the pandemic winds down in the next few years. Satisfaction levels are high, but adults aren’t feeling as valued by their primary bank. To maintain loyalty, banks need to offer seamless transaction experiences as well as positive customer service interactions.
