“In trying to understand just how rapidly the modern grocery sector has grown in China, it has to be realised that all of the approximately 50,000 supermarkets and hypermarkets that now exist in China have appeared within a single generation, or less than 25 years. China is now the world’s second-largest economy, its domestic consumer economy is growing in importance within the overall economy, it is growing fast, and it is increasingly controlled by large retail chain store businesses, of which supermarkets and hypermarkets are among the most powerful. It is therefore hard to understated the significance of this sector and the companies that are coming to dominate it.”

– Matthew Crabbe – Asia-Pacific Research Director

In this report we answer the key questions:

- How fast has the market grown, is it still growing fast and where is the growth heading now?
- How are rising incomes affecting retail consumption patterns in different regions of China?
- How is the modern grocery sector developing its retail format to suit the changing China market?
- Which retail brands are proving the most successful, and what is it about them that consumers like?
- How important are non-retail services in building consumer footfall and loyalty?
- How fast has online grocery retail grown, is it still growing fast, and will it continue to do so?

Included in this report:

- Supermarkets: Modern chain grocery (food and non-food) retail outlets with sales areas of between 300m2 and 5,999m2.
- Hypermarkets: Modern chain grocery (food and non-food) retail outlets with sales areas of 6,000m2 and above.
- Discount stores: Modern chain grocery (food and non-food) retail outlets of a size equivalent to supermarkets that specialise in discount-priced products.
- Warehouse stores: Modern chain grocery (food and non-food) retail outlets that require shoppers to become members before they can use the store – usually, but not exclusively, for business owners.
- Modern grocery: Includes all of the above plus convenience stores (included only in comparison against the core market), which are defined as being modern chain grocery outlets with sales areas of less than 300m2.
- Online grocery: Online retail businesses that sell both food and non-food products.

Your business guide towards growth and profitability

A Mintel report is your one, best resource for information and analysis on consumer markets and categories.

Each report contains:

- Primary consumer research
- Market size and five year forecast
- Market share and segmentation
- Brand and communications analysis
- Product and service innovation

To see what we cover in this report click on the report's "contents" section.